Ladies and Gentlemen,

IFC, a member of the World Bank Group, is the largest global development institution focused exclusively on the private sector. We help developing countries achieve sustainable growth by financing investment, providing advisory services to businesses and governments, and mobilizing capital in the international financial markets.

In fiscal 2011, amid economic uncertainty across the globe, we helped our clients create jobs, strengthen environmental performance, and contribute to their local communities – all while driving our investments to an all-time high of nearly $19 billion.

Money alone can't address the needs of the developing world. We are leveraging our expertise and global presence to find new approaches to the most pressing challenges – from food and water security to climate change to job creation, especially for women and youth.

The 2008 crisis underscored the need for innovative initiatives that maximize the private sector's capacity to create opportunity and promote inclusive growth. For example small and medium-sized enterprises, which create more than half of employment worldwide, saw lines of credit reduced or eliminated as investors shied away from capital markets. IFC stepped in to fill the gap.

Now the Eurozone crisis could affect developing countries in a similar way through lower foreign direct investment and financial instability. We are preparing to once again play a countercyclical role if needed, and are helping to leverage private sector resources for development at a time when public resources are scarce.

The IFC conference at EURO FINANCE WEEK, under the theme »Innovations in Emerging Market Finance«, provides an opportunity to share with you some of the innovations we and our clients are using to create measurable development impact during this time of financial and economic uncertainty. I am certain it will lead to a better understanding of emerging markets and help us work together to strengthen the global economy.

I would like to thank the State of Hessen for its strong support for IFC's work and for hosting this event. We hope you will enjoy this half day of insights from financial experts and dynamic panels on trends affecting the global economy today.

3rd IFC – EURO FINANCE WEEK Conference

Innovations in Emerging Markets Finance

Basel III capital requirements, the Eurozone crisis, and worldwide financial market instability are making investors more cautious. How can they continue to take advantage of the opportunities in emerging markets? And how can multilateral development banks continue to provide the access to finance that will create opportunity and employment for the poor?

Experts from IFC, the private sector arm of the World Bank Group, and key partners and clients will discuss these issues and provide creative solutions, including projects that won the IFC Corporate Award for their innovation, development impact, efficiency, and client focus.

Deepening Emerging Financial Markets – New Products and New Investors

DFIs and MDBs are increasingly accessing both international and domestic capital markets to mobilize financing for borrowers in developing countries. Innovative new products are being created to address priorities such as climate change, agriculture and infrastructure. Many contribute to deepening developing countries' financial markets and catalyzing institutional investors and financial institutions to provide long-term financing, often in local currency, to highly developmental sectors of the economy such as SMEs, education, and affordable housing.

11:45 a.m. Panel Discussion II

The Impact of Basel III – Risk Sharing in Emerging Markets

Emerging markets will likely be impacted by the increased capital requirements of Basel III in the short term. Financial flows from advanced economies could decline – by World Bank estimates up to 3 percent – and trade flows could drop due to lower worldwide economic activity. There are some solutions that promise good returns to investors and will keep short term finance flowing to emerging markets.
